Try yoga, weight-training, TRX and a host of other activities. Work out alongside folks your age, from the tiniest keiki in swim class to kūpuna doing tai chi. At the YMCA OF HONOLULU, you can find a place to fit in at one of the six branches across the island, whether you're a fitness newbie or a seasoned athlete. Hazel Walker, 68, has worked at the Nu’uanu Y for 11 years. “It’s very community- and family-oriented; they don’t feel the need to be best dressed or most fit to come here,” she says. Be inspired by members such as 102-year-old Sau Chun, who attends senior and water aerobics classes weekly. Multiple locations, ymcahonolulu.org.

For 40 years, BIKEFACTORY has helped people roll all over Oahu. Founder Wally Parcell, his son and vice president, Mitch, and their 20 employees not only bring in the latest bikes, electric bikes, skateboards, rollerblades, scooters and accessories, they’ll work on pretty much anything on wheels. “We’re an old-school traditional store where we service what we sell,” Mitch says. “We’ll make sure bicycles are properly set up, safe, shifting well. Our skate shop will help you customize. We’re willing to create and have fun with you.” Multiple locations, bikefactoryhawaii.com.
